

You're Invited to a Healthcare Professional CE Group Viewing Event

Food Allergy Tests Are Not Screening Tests

David Stukus, MD, discusses food allergy screening tests. As caregivers are presented with a variety of direct-to-consumer allergy and intolerance testing options, it is essential that health care providers are prepared to answer questions about the validity of these direct-to-consumer tests and the role of testing in diagnosing food allergy. It is also essential to understand the role the validated testing options and their limitations.
